

About the F92B notification form

Notification of agreement to arbitration of a dispute about the employee right to disconnect

About employee right to disconnect disputes

The Fair Work Act 2009 (the Fair Work Act) gives employees a right to refuse to monitor, read or respond to contact, or attempted contact from:

- an employer, or
- a third party (if the contact or attempted contact relates to the employee's work), outside their working hours, unless their refusal is unreasonable.

This is known as the employee right to disconnect.

The Fair Work Commission (the Commission) can deal with a dispute about the employee right to disconnect if:

- an employee has refused to monitor, read or respond to contact, or attempted contact, outside their working hours and the employer:
 - reasonably believes this refusal is unreasonable, or
 - has asserted that the refusal is unreasonable and the employee reasonably believes the refusal is not unreasonable, or
- the employee and employer have another dispute about how the employee right to disconnect operates.

You can find out more about disputes about the employee right to disconnect on our website.

Where to get help

Commission staff & resources

Commission staff cannot provide legal advice. However, staff can give you information on:

- processes in the Commission
- how to make an application to the Commission
- how to fill out forms
- where to find useful documents such as legislation and decisions
- other organisations that may be able to assist you.

The Commission's website www.fwc.gov.au also contains a range of information that may assist.

Legal or other representation

Representation is where another person speaks or acts on your behalf or assists you in certain other ways in relation to a matter before the Commission. A representative could be a lawyer, paid agent, union, employer organisation or a not-for-profit association or body that provides support, advice or advocacy in relation to the kind of application or case concerned.

A representative is different from a support person. A support person is someone you bring with you to a legal proceeding who can give you emotional support, such as a family member or friend.

You do not have to be represented in a case at the Commission.

There are some rules about when a lawyer or paid agent can represent you.

Unless the Commission decides otherwise in a particular case, a lawyer or paid agent can represent you without permission to:

- prepare and lodge this application,
- prepare and lodge submissions about your case, and
- write to the Commission and other people involved in the case on your behalf.

Generally, you must give notice to the Commission and seek permission from the Commission Member dealing with your case if you wish to have a lawyer or paid agent represent you in a conference or a hearing.

You do not need to ask permission or give notice if the lawyer or paid agent is:

- for an employer—your employee or officer, or

- an employee or officer of a union or employer organisation that is representing you.

You can notify the Commission using this form that you have a lawyer or paid agent—provide their details at ‘Does the party lodging this notification have a representative?’

If you need to notify the Commission that you have a lawyer or paid agent after you have lodged this form, or if you need to ask permission for a lawyer or paid agent to take part in a conference or hearing, use form F53.

For more information about representation by lawyers and paid agents, see section 596 of the Fair Work Act 2009, rules 11, 12, 13 and 14 of the Fair Work Commission Rules 2024, and the Commission’s practice note on representation by lawyers and paid agents.

The Commission collects the information (including personal information) provided to it in this form for inclusion on the case file, and may disclose this information to the other parties to this matter and to other persons.
